I love Harry Potter. My friends love Harry Potter. We watch the movies, listen to the audiobooks, and read the tattered paperbacks. We are so magically spellbound by the series not only because of our (continued-into-adulthood) desire to attend Hogwarts, but also because of the way that Rowling shares her story. She is a magnificent storyteller and believes that "there's always room for a story that can transport people to another place." We are transported when we hear her story, but also when we grasp our wand replicas, flick them in the air, and pronounce "Wingardium Leviosa."

THANK YOU!
