How to Choose an Availability Option

Baylor University's Policy

Unless you choose to embargo (delay release) your Electronic Thesis/Dissertation (ETD), your document will be findable and openly accessible on the Internet via BEARdocs (<http://beardocs.baylor.edu>) in the semester following your graduation.

Why would I choose a two-year embargo?

You may desire this option if you have a pending journal publication and the publisher requests that you delay access to your thesis or if you have patent and/or similar proprietary reasons for withholding your thesis from open access. This option restricts access to your work for a period of two years. This embargo may be extended if an email is sent to the address below before the initial embargo ends. Note: Once your article is published, please send library personnel the citation information so that we can add this information to the descriptive information associated with your ETD so researchers will be aware of the publication.

Why would I choose a five-year embargo?

You may desire this option if you are (or will be) submitting material to a journal or book publisher. Some publishers prefer not to publish material that has been openly accessible. This option restricts access to your document for five years. This embargo may be extended if an email is sent to the address below before the initial embargo ends. Note: Once your article or book is published, please send library personnel the citation information so that we can add this information to the descriptive information associated with your ETD so researchers will also be aware of the publication.

Can I extend my embargo?

Yes. If you find it necessary to extend your embargo, send an e-mail to libraryquestions@baylor.edu before the initial embargo period ends.

Questions about availability options? If you still have questions or concerns about availability options, please e-mail us at libraryquestions@baylor.edu.
